Whimsical acrylic paintings on salvaged materials, old doors, barnwood, etc.

Artist Bio

Deona Fish's "Sleepy Little Dreams" are paintings that open a doorway into a nostalgic world where whim and simplicity guide you into feelings and memories still lingering from childhood. Her characters are expressions of the innocence inherent in all beings, the common thread we share with all life. It is wonderfully obvious that her source of inspiration was the preschool and kindergarten children she taught, along with her three year old son. Her paintings embody their innate sense of creativity but with a calm tone and muted color cultivated by her time with nature and in her little cabin on the side of a hill in Leicester, NC.

Over the past four years, Deona has been traveling the southeast attending outsider and folk art festivals. The exposure to such amazing artists and kind people has spurred a growth in her work. She is currently displaying her work at Atelier 24 Lexington and Woolworth Walk Gallery in Asheville, NC and A Thousand Faces in Nashville, TN.

Artist Statement

My paintings combine my life experiences, my dreams my loves using color and design. Working on old doors and found materials compliment the nostalgic feel that my paintings convey.
